

I am very pleased with the Indiana Telephone Privacy law. Marketing entities should not have interfering/disturbing telephone access to our private lives. Any national laws, if necessary, should be at least as restrictive as the most restrictive state legislation rather than less. Access to our private lives should be protected by legislation rather than sold to business.

Sincerely,

Jerry Morgan